Bidding war. The local brewer filed for the "Boston 2024" trademark on Wednesday as it was revealed that support for the Olympics is at an all-time low. The brewer, however, hopes to own the rights to be the city's beer if the Summer Olympics do make it over here. PAGE 02

Brewery files for 'Boston 2024' trademark attempt

Hopping to it. Amid the fight over the city's Olympic bid, Sam Adams seeks "Boston 2024" mark for the brewery.

Sam Adams Brewery in Boston / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

As backers of Boston's embattled bid to host the 2024 Olympic Games struggle to overcome public opposition, the maker of the city's famous Sam Adams beer has jumped into the fray by applying for a "Boston 2024" beer trademark.

The Boston Beer Co. has applied to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office for a trademark on the words "Boston 2024," which would be limited to beer, Jessica Paar, a spokeswoman for the brewery, said on Wednesday.

"We were introduced recently to members of the Boston 2024 Committee and had a very preliminary conversation about collaborating on a special beer in the future," Paar said. "There's nothing set in stone. It's just a fun idea we talked about."

The Boston 2024 host committee is in the midst of reworking its pitch to the city after polls showed more residents of Boston oppose the idea of hosting the Summer Games than support it.

A poll conducted for WBUR radio by the MassInc Polling Group and released on Wednesday showed 49 percent of respondents opposed the idea of having the Games in Boston. Just 39 percent of the 502 registered Massachusetts voters interviewed between June 4-6 supported it.

Opponents of the bid have raised concerns about the spiraling cost of recent Olympic Games, including the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi for which Russia spent more than $50 billion.

Proponents have said the Boston bid would cost just $9.5 billion and would be funded privately rather than with tax revenues.

Backers have called for a statewide ballot initiative in 2016 on whether to go ahead with the bid and said that without majority support, Boston would not challenge rivals including Rome; Paris and Hamburg, Germany, seeking the 2024 Games. REUTERS

Caught. Fugitive accused of beating baby busted hiding under sink

The sink / PROVIDED

Massachusetts State Police scratched a Top 10 Most Wanted fugitive off their list early Wednesday after they caught a man accused of breaking a baby's ribs hiding underneath a kitchen sink.

The man wanted for beating a 9-month-old girl in Cape Cod was busted in a makeshift hideout made of wood and Sheetrock underneath the sink in his girlfriend's apartment in Belchertown. He had been evading authorities since last year.

State Police Violent Fugitive Apprehension Section and Belchtertown police arrested Keith Truehart, 30, about 5 a.m.

He was to be arraigned in Belchertown District Court on assault and battery on a child causing substantial bodily injury and witness intimidation.

Truehart was also wanted by Amherst police for assault and battery and malicious destruction of property charges.

On Nov. 15, 2014, Belchertown police responded to a report of a 9-month-old baby who was injured in a fall. But when police arrived, they found injuries that were not consistent with a fall, including significant bruising on the child's forehead and around both eyes.

The child was taken to a nearby trauma center, where medical personnel discovered the child had also suffered two rib fractures.

Medical evidence indicated that these injuries were not accidental.

Belchertown police determined that Truehart had been alone with the child at the time of the injuries and that he had fled prior to police and paramedics arrival.

He skipped town once authorities started investigating the incident. After a lengthy investigation, Truehart was added to the State Police's Top 10 Most Wanted Fugitives list on June 1. NATE HOMAN

Indoor skate park housed in pop-up space

Space. Skaters will have an innovative new pop-up space in Allston Village.

POP Allston, in Allston Village, will be home to a free public indoor skate park — just one of the facilities on offer at the innovative community space.

A vintage market with many vendors and a bicycle repair space will also be featured at 89 Brighton Avenue, which will serve as a temporary pop-up community area.

The second and third floors of the space, about 10,000 square feet, will be dedicated to the Orchard Conservatory Skate Park. The Conservatory will be one of the first free indoor public skate parks in the world.

"It's going to be sick, we'll definitely need it in the winter." said skateboarder Gavin Nolan, 25, of Weymouth, as he practiced his kickflips along Nashua Street in Boston on Wednesday.

The park will boast varying terrains and will employ sustainable materials that can be relocated to another skate park once POP Allston ends. Once the park is open, Orchard Skate Shop will manage and maintain the park as well as hold skateboarding camps and lessons in the facility.

There will also be a weekly multivendor vintage market held at POP Allston called "Oliver Bests Market" which will feature a variety of vintage items such as apparel, decor, and records sponsored by Vivant Vintage, a local Allston vintage store.

"It's nice to see the city step forward to help the arts and culture," Vivant Vintage owner and Oliver Best Market brainchild Justin E. Pomerleau said. "That had been my major qualm in Boston.

A lot of artists were leaving Boston because it wasn't an artist-friendly environment. We hope we're improving the image of Boston by showing that it's more than a sports and historical city."

Pomerleau said it's exciting to bring together like-minded people under 30 in one space. "I never thought I'd be a business person, I was always more of an artist," he said. Branding together with other vendors is valuable for small businesses."

Mayor Marty Walsh said that believes the space would add to the neighborhood.

Church fight

Parishioners get breathing room in long standoff

A decade-long standoff between parishioners trying to save their Massachusetts church and church leaders who want to close it will last a little longer, following a Wednesday appeals court decision.

Parishioners of St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church in Scituate, south of Boston, have maintained a 24-hour vigil in their church since the Archdiocese of Boston in 2004 named it as one of 70 parishes it intended to close in a restructuring.

The church is the last of a half-dozen parishes in the archdiocese that had been occupied by parishioners seeking to prevent their shutdown. Other groups have since abandoned their efforts or lost in the courts.

The group staging the vigil, the Friends of St. Frances X. Cabrini, welcomed the decision. REUTERS

T. Man gets life in prison for random bus stabbing

Life in prison / JONATHAN WIGGS

The man convicted of randomly stabbing to death a fellow passenger as he stepped off an MBTA bus was sentenced to life in prison on Wednesday.

Javahon Goodwin, 23, was convicted of second-degree murder on Monday for the stabbing death of Rashad Lesley-Barnes on Aug. 12, 2012. Goodwin followed Lesley-Barnes off the Route 23 bus and stabbed him multiple times, then fled the scene.

"While we can never bring true closure to Rashad's family, I hope that today's sentencing brings them a sense of peace in knowing that the person responsible for his murder has been held accountable," Suffolk County District Attorney Dan Conley said in a press release.

"Their strength and grace through a terrible ordeal were inspiring to all of us, and they remind us what a special young man Rashad must have been."

"I'll never get to see him be a father, because he never had children. I'll never get to have a mother-son dance at his wedding," Lesley-Barnes' mother said in a tearful victim impact statement.

"I don't want myself or my family to be labeled as 'victims,'" Lesley-Barnes' older sister told the court. "We are survivors. It takes a special type of person to survive these circumstances."

Pope backs new tribunal to hold bishops to account

Abuse. Victims' groups have been urging the Vatican to establish clear steps to make bishops more accountable.

Pope Francis / GETTY IMAGES

Pope Francis approved on Wednesday an unprecedented Vatican tribunal to judge bishops accused of covering up or failing to prevent sexual abuse of minors, but one victims' group branded the move as too little, too late.

A statement said the tribunal would come under the auspices of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Vatican's doctrinal arm, "to judge bishops with regard to crimes of the abuse of office when connected to the abuse of minors."

Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi told reporters the bishops could also be judged if they had failed to take measures to prevent sexual abuse of minors.

The complaints against the bishops would initially be investigated by one of three Vatican departments, depending on the jurisdiction under which the bishops fall, before being judged by the doctrinal tribunal.

The U.S.-based Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests (SNAP) said the pope should have gone much further.

"[The pope] could have sacked dozens of complicit bishops. He has, however, sacked no one," SNAP said in a statement.

SNAP urged victims of abuse to "stay vigilant and withhold judgment until we see if and how this panel might act."

However, Anne Barrett Doyle of BishopAccountability.org, an independent group that helps tackle the issue in the Catholic church, cautiously welcomed the announcement. REUTERS

Four things to know

1 Obama orders deployment of up to 450 more troops to Iraq

President Barack Obama on Wednesday ordered the deployment of up to 450 more U.S. troops and the establishment of a new training base in Iraq's Anbar province to help rebuild Iraqi forces in preparation for a battle to retake territory lost to Islamic State.

The plan to expand the 3,100-strong U.S. contingent of trainers and advisers in Iraq marks an adjustment in strategy for Obama, who has faced mounting pressure to do more to blunt the momentum of Islamic State insurgents.

Obama decided on the new troop deployment in response to a request from Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi, the White House said. The two leaders met on the margins of the G7 summit in Germany earlier this week.

But with Obama sticking to his refusal to send troops into combat or even close to the front lines, it is unlikely to silence critics who say the limited U.S. military role in the conflict is not enough to turn the tide of battle.

U.S. officials hope that a strengthened American presence on the ground in Anbar will help Iraqi forces devise a counterattack to retake the provincial capital Ramadi, which insurgents seized last month in an onslaught that further exposed the shortcomings of the Iraqi army. REUTERS

2 FIFA shelves bidding for 2026 World Cup

Scandal-plagued FIFA postponed the bidding for the right to host the 2026 World Cup on Wednesday and embarked on a search to find a replacement for the outgoing FIFA president, Sepp Blatter.

Jerome Valcke, the secretary general of FIFA, said during an event in Russia that it would be "nonsense" to start the bidding process for the tournament for the time being.

Meanwhile, FIFA said its executive committee would hold an extraordinary meeting in July to discuss "various date options" for the congress that will elect Blatter's replacement. REUTERS

3 Jeb Bush says Putin is a 'bully'

Likely Republican presidential candidate Jeb Bush said on Wednesday that Russian President Vladimir Putin was a "bully," and the United States and its allies in Europe should be resolute in responding to Russian aggression.

Bush, the brother of former U.S. President George W. Bush, is on a five-day tour of Europe in a bid to prove his foreign policy credentials before he is expected to launch his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination next week. REUTERS

4 Uber loses bid for arbitration in US driver lawsuits

Uber lost a bid to force arbitration in a lawsuit brought by its drivers as a U.S. judge ruled the smartphone-based taxi service's 2013 and 2014 employment contracts dealing with arbitration were "unconscionable and therefore unenforceable."

The ruling, from U.S. District Judge Edward Chen in San Francisco on Tuesday, allows the lawsuits over driver background checks to continue in federal court. Arbitration is generally viewed as a friendlier forum for corporate defendants.

The decision is the latest in a host of legal and regulatory challenges facing Uber. Earlier this year, the same judge rejected Uber's bid to deem its drivers independent contractors, which would have prohibited them from recovering a range of expenses. Chen said a jury would decide that question.

In a statement on Wednesday, Uber said it disagreed with the arbitration ruling and will plan to appeal it. REUTERS

Synthetic. Cheap 'flakka' on Florida drug scene

Flakka /BROWARD COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE

For decades, South Florida has battled drug traffickers who ship boatloads of cocaine from South America. Now the region is dealing with a new epidemic — cheap, synthetic drugs that arrive from China through the mail.

As authorities in the Sunshine State battle with the surge of Alpha-PVP, better known as "flakka" or "gravel," police departments have begun equipping officers with field detection kits, employing sniffer dogs at mail facilities and training patrol units to look for signs of delirium.

The drug's popularity, however, is only growing. In 2014, the first year it appeared in the state, authorities in Broward County, which includes Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood, recorded 190 incidents involving flakka. By early May of this year, the number of incidents involving the drug had already raced past 275.

"Cocaine was king, until this year," said Detective William Schwartz, a veteran narcotics officer with the Broward County Sheriff's Office.

Flakka

Once it hits the streets, a single dose can sell for as little as $5.

The drug is widely advertised for sale online by Chinese companies and can be shipped in large quantities to U.S. addresses by established global delivery companies.

Flakka, which was placed on the U.S. list of illegal controlled substances in 2014, is chemically designed to mimic cathinone, a natural stimulant found in the leaves of the khat plant, chewed traditionally in the Arabian Peninsula and East Africa.

It gets its nickname from the Spanish slang for a slender and attractive woman and is similar to ecstasy or MDMA and so-called "Molly." It is sold as small, clear crystals that can be popped in the mouth or smoked.

Users are said to feel a sense of superhuman strength and delirium. REUTERS

New York state. Manhunt for escaped inmates expands to Vermont

Richard Matt and David Sweat / NY STATE POLICE

The manhunt for two inmates who escaped from a New York maximum security prison expanded to neighboring Vermont on Wednesday as the pair set a record for the longest jailbreak in New York history, authorities said.

Richard Matt, 48, and David Sweat, 34, escaped from Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, New York, five days ago, cutting through steel walls, squeezing through a steam pipe and popping out of a manhole.

More than 450 state, federal and local law enforcement agents were searching the area north of New York's rugged Adirondack Park on Wednesday, with the search extending into neighboring Vermont, New York State Police Superintendent Joseph D'Amico told reporters.

They may have had help from a female prison worker who befriended the inmates, New York State Police said on Wednesday.

Prior to escaping, the men discussed heading for Vermont, a rural state with dense forests and seasonal cabins, accessible by a ferry across Lake Champlain, about 40 miles south of the prison, police said.

The longest previous escape from a New York prison lasted just three days, according to data from the New York Department of Corrections and Community Supervision. In other New York state prison escapes, freedom lasted less than six hours for 60 percent of the 30 inmates who succeeded in fleeing in the last decade.

Elaborate escape schemes generally require equally detailed plans for fleeing the area and living life under the radar. That is where most fugitives fall short. REUTERS

Things to know

Here's what we know:

- David Sweat stands at 5-feet-11 and weighs 165 pounds. He reportedly has "Rebel" tattooed on his left bicep and "IFB" on his fingers.
- Richard Matt, who was also known as "Hacksaw" in the slammer, stands at 6 feet, weighs 210 pounds and features several tattoos (one of which reads "Mexico Forever").
- Prison officials are reportedly interviewing all those employed by the prison to find out who exactly helped Sweat and Matt escape.
- Investigators think a woman who worked with Richard Matt and David Sweat at the Clinton Correctional Facility planned to pick the convicted killers up after they escaped but changed her mind at the last minute, a source familiar with the investigation tells CNN. She reportedly checked herself into a hospital because of a panic attack and has not been charged. MATT LEE

Richard Matt is credited with two murders, one of which involved torturing and dismembering his former boss, thus the "hacksaw" nickname.

Jennifer Garner calls in the lawyers

This certainly won't help all those divorce rumors swirling around Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner's marriage. The latest? "She can't take it anymore. She's been consulting with a high-profile divorce lawyer," a source tells Life & Style, adding that while Garner was in Montreal recently for work, "she got a call that Ben was 40 minutes late to pick up the kids from school. She had to scramble to arrange another ride for them." While that might not seem like a major infraction, it's apparently one of those last straw situations. "She doesn't trust Ben alone with the kids," the source says. "Custody is not negotiable." This sounds like it will be the opposite of fun.

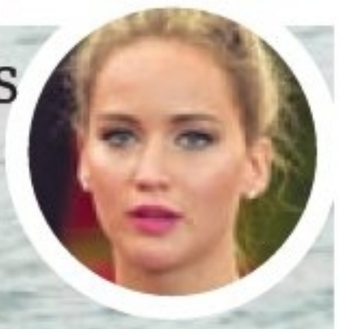
Mindy Kaling doesn't appreciate being called a hot mess

The finicky folks over at GossipGirl.com went a bit out of their way to call out Mindy Kaling for her fashion choices by dubbing her a "hot mess" based on some of her recent red carpet looks. Oh, and they even snuck in a little dig at her fans, writing, "Mindy Kaling is one of those 'woman of the people' types who basics find soooooo hilars." That stings, Gossip Girl. That really stings. Anyway, Kaling was more than able to defend herself, tweeting back simply, "Whoa, you guys are d—s." And she has a point. XOXO.



Gwyneth Paltrow's awkward family vacation

For Brad and Jen's sake, let's hope that Gwyneth and Chris don't re-enact this scene from their 2002 Hawaii trip.

There's showing off that you're totally OK with your ex-husband dating again, and then there's this, which is just plain weird: Gwyneth Paltrow is planning, depending on how you look at it, a family vacation where she and Chris Martin each bring along their significant others — "Glee" co-creator Brad Falchuk for her, Jennifer Lawrence for him — or she's planning an intimate couples' retreat for the foursome that just so happens to also include their kids. Either way, yikes. "Gwyneth recognizes it's time for Jen to meet the whole family, and she wants Chris to be there for Brad's first proper bonding experience with the children," a source tells RadarOnline.

"The plan is to spend a week together in Hawaii as soon as all their schedules permit but definitely before the end of summer." If you think this is a terrible idea, Lawrence is apparently right there with you: "Jen is dreading it," the source adds. "Chris is still spellbound by Gwyneth and her rules, so he's insisting on it." Happy trails?

The 'Glee' tell-all you never asked for is coming

And they say publishing is a dying industry. Naya Rivera just inked a deal to have a "memoir" published in spring 2016 with the snappy title "Sorry Not Sorry: Dreams, Mistakes and Growing Up." Rivera promises "so many juicy stories about my life, 'Glee,' guys, growing up and so much more," while the publisher pitches it as "candid thoughts on topics ranging from dating to the challenges of being mixed race in Hollywood." So if you're one of those unique folks who is desperate for tawdry behind-the-scenes tales from "Glee," but you're also willing to wait about a year to, you know, actually read any of them, then this is great news for you. Cheers.

What if catcalls were cheeseburgers?

The title of this video, "What if Catcalls Were Cheeseburgers," may sound like an absurd Dadaist mad-lib, but there's a very funny and delicious point here. It takes that "woman walking through the city" video meme and replaces all the overly forward things men say to her with, well, cheeseburgers. That they hand to her. Well, sometimes they don't hand them so much as throw them. But honestly, if she didn't want cheeseburgers, why did she walk around carrying that plate?

Laverne Cox wants to spill secrets

See Laverne Cox in the new season of "Orange Is the New Black" this Friday on Netflix. / JOJO WHILDEN, NETFLIX

Binge. The "Orange Is the New Black" star is desperate to talk about the new season.

Laverne Cox is very ready for Friday's premiere of the third season of "Orange Is the New Black" to go ahead and get here already, if only so that she can finally talk about new plot developments, particularly about her character, Sophia Burset. "I just want people to see it so we can really get into it," says Cox, who has been sworn to secrecy since filming the latest batch of episodes a few months ago.

Luckily for us, she is willing to tease a little bit of information. "The third season was my favorite to shoot," she says. "I think we just got deeper into who Sophia is, what makes her tick. I got to do some stuff that I've never gotten to do before on camera."

But it's not just the trajectory of her character that had her so impressed. "Just the stories hit me in my gut, every single one. Every script I read I would just sit in my apartment just being so moved to my core," Cox says. "There was one episode where I was like, 'OK this is really serious. This is bigger than me.' I have to really honor the story, and you have to connect with something bigger than you. That's what it's really all about."

While we can only guess — for now — what that episode is all about, it's good to know that Cox shares a desire familiar to a lot of fans of the series. "I've told [series creator] Jenji [Kohan] I want to be in the writers' room, but that's never going to happen," Cox says. "I would just love to see how they do it. That is my dream."

COX
JASON LAVERIS/ FILMMAGIC

With its much-anticipated new season in the offing and the show already enjoying plenty of critical and awards love, Cox feels confident in doing a little back-patting, especially given how Netflix and binge-watching have changed viewers' approach to TV. "It was 2013 when we premiered. Things have changed a lot in terms of the culture, and I love that we were kind of at the forefront of it," she says.

With a mostly female cast including an impressive number of women of color, the show is also at the forefront of the changing face of TV, something Cox is happy to see — but under one condition.

"An unprecedented number of pilots this season had 'minority' actors — I hate that word — actors from different racial and ethnic backgrounds, which is great but it's so weird," she says. "I don't like the idea of it being a trend because trends come and go. I like the idea of it being a real change that happens where we see the real diversity of this country represented on television."

"It was 2013 when we premiered. Things have changed a lot in terms of the culture, and I love that we were kind of at the forefront of it."

KATNISS: STILL A GREAT FEMALE CHARACTER

The new trailer for "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay – Part 2" was just released and it once again reminded me how much I love Katniss Everdeen. She defies every stereotype of a heroine we've been brought up to know and love, and it's as refreshing as a giant bucket of ice water thrown in my face.

Katniss is just … different. She's hard, but not unbending. She's had to deal with the death of her father and a mother who's checked out; she has to take care of her sister and deal with famine and a society that prizes children fighting to the death in an arena for their entertainment.

The thing is, she's not just hard. She hasn't turned into one of those kickass chicks we're shown who are so hard after rape/torture/loss of children and loved ones that they have no feelings left and therefore must be killed at the end, because we can't hook them up with someone. What guy can handle a chick "harder" than him, amirite? Katniss is a realistic portrayal of a young woman who has to fight to survive, but she isn't a robot.

She's also human in the way she deals with what ails her. Your usual hero kills and fights and has no other reaction besides a long-suffering yet supersexy look on their face. Killing is just a thing they do. Katniss is absolutely suffering from PTSD, dealing with what it means to actually take another life. She's a mess, as any one of us would be.

Like any young woman, she thinks about love and relationships, but like anyone dealing with this sort of unimaginable trauma, she doesn't always have time for it. When she does, it's a product of real time spent together and shared hardships (Gale), or shared trauma and experiences (Peeta). It's not just gazing at a pretty guy (ahem, "Twilight") and thinking you're not good enough.

This is the sort of character I've been hoping for after years of seeing ciphers and Mary Sues. She's not there as mere scene dressing. She's not a fantasy creature who's above it all. She's not damaged goods that can't go on, though she is indeed

Best Coast's best yet

Best Coast's new album hints at '80s and '90s musical influences. / JANELL SHIRTCLIFF

Bethany Cosentino, half of the duo Best Coast, gets candid about insomnia, jealousy and breakups on the band's third album, "California Nights."

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

When you write your lyrics as literally as Bethany Cosentino does, looking back at old songs is like flipping through an old diary. "Our first album, 'Crazy For You,' was very much a 22-year-old lovesick girl, and the next album, 'The Only Place,' was when I was 24 and that was sort of like, 'What the hell is going on?' The new album is still kind of like, 'What the hell is going on?' but I also have a better grasp," the 28-year-old tells us on the phone from her native California.

Drake, California-style

But even if you're not touring in an alt-rock band, playing big festivals like SXSW and Coachella, Cosentino promises you'll still relate. "One of my favorite artists is Drake, and the reason why I like him so much is because even though he's a super-famous, rich rapper, he talks about experiences and feelings in his life that [anyone] can relate to," she says. "That's something that will always be a part of Best Coast. I want people to be able to relate."

Loving the '90s

Musically, this album is more '90s-focused than their past albums, and Cosentino says she and Bobb Bruno, the other half of the duo, were inspired by a wide range of musical influences, many that fans wouldn't expect. "Bobb was really influenced by the Gwen Stefani song 'Cool' and by Jane's Addiction. I was really inspired by Hole and Oasis," she says.

The result is an album that Cosentino, Bruno and critics say is the band's best yet. "For the first time, we felt like we could go out of the box and not just be closed off to certain influences," Cosentino says. Now the duo is looking forward to touring all summer long, another part of their job Cosentino says they've gotten even better at. "When fans see us on this tour, they'll think we've evolved a lot. We're all a lot more confident on stage, so I look forward to fans experiencing that."

Maintaining relationships

One of the staples of Best Coast — besides a happy, psychedelic soundscape — is Cosentino's commitment to singing blatantly about what she's feeling, be it trouble moving on ("Fine Without You"), insomnia ("Sleep Won't Ever Come") or intensely missing someone ("Fading Fast").

"I've been trying to manage being in a touring band while also having relationships," she explains. "Not even just romantic ones but also friendships and relationships with my family. You feel disconnected from the world that you were once a part of [when touring]."

The death of three out of four members of the Exploding Hearts in a 2003 car accident was one of the great tragedies in indie rock memory. As for their music, it's full-blast, satin-lined ear candy, unusually (and awesomely) soulful for a couple of Brooklyn hipsters. Matthew Dinaro

Don't forget to try the tuna crudo if you visit Select Oyster Bar, which is at 50 Gloucester St. KAT LEGGETT

A new raw bar comes to town

For anyone in search of the best oysters in town, add another contender to your quest. Longtime Neptune Oyster chef Michael Serpa made the move to his own place, opening Select Oyster Bar in Back Bay in April.

"I think it's kind of a natural progression for people in the restaurant industry to want to have their own expression and their own version of a restaurant. So the opportunity came about and it fit well for what I wanted to do, and we did it," explains Serpa.

But don't go looking for a scandal in his departure from Neptune, where he worked for seven years. "It was a great, great place to work," affirms the chef. "I wouldn't have left there to work somewhere else if it wasn't for myself."

As to the menu itself, Serpa says they're "leaning Mediterranean" in their food choices. "We definitely have a lot of Basque Spanish influences as well. But we're trying to stay away from the super classic New England stuff like the chowder and clams and that sort of stuff."

The menu also features plenty of crudité options, which Serpa says have been a hit with customers, as well as the wine pairings they set them with. "That was one of the most creative and fun things for me, to make a wine list and make it seafood-centric, seafood-friendly. But also cover all the bases, so we have classic wines on there," he explains.

And if you're overwhelmed by all the options, Serpa has a quick recommendation for what to pair. "I would say the tuna crudo with the Txakolina rosé would be really nice."

How to see an artist's work 'All at Once'

The show runs through Sept. 7 at the ICA. CAROLINE MACNEILLE

The ICA's latest gives a thorough overview of Arlene Shechet's work.

CAROLINE MACNEILLE
letters@metro.us

Time to head out to the waterfront: "All at Once," a 20-year survey of work by Arlene Shechet, is open now at the Institute of Contemporary Art. Shechet is known for her material variety and the exhibit features blown glass, plaster, paper, clay, wood, brick and porcelain. Curator Jenelle Porter describes Shechet's work as "recasting century-old tradition into her mold."

The exhibit progresses chronologically, beginning with early work from the '90s when Shechet was primarily working with plaster. She says that plaster's quickness to dry helped her focus in the studio. While the forms were initially intended to be abstract, Shechet couldn't help but notice the shape of a Buddha in her work. For the following year, she continued making plaster Buddha sculptures and companion paper pieces.

The show is expansive. Each room represents a phase of her work, and each phase seamlessly gives way to the next, emphasizing the artist's evolution. In the main hall of the exhibit, glazed sculptures fill the space. They're reminiscent of organs, bubbling and sagging with many tiny holes. Each is on a custom pedestal made from a wide range of material, including metal and brick. Porter explains that in doing this, Shechet is "using the apparatus of the studio in the sculpture."

But unlike previous exhibits, Shechet's sculptures are not sensitive to light, so the curators were able to open the museum's ceiling-length skylights. The light compliments the work, illuminating the space, form and material.

There's a good chance "All at Once" is the most of Shechet's work you'll see in one place. In addition to the sculptures acquired for the exhibit, the ICA borrowed work from permanent collections at the Museum of Fine Art and the Harvard Art Museums. When asked how many pieces were in the show, Shechet had to think before answering, "More than 300 probably." She had never counted, and after seeing the exhibit, you'll understand why.

One room alone holds nearly 50 porcelain sculptures from the artist's time in residence at Meissen, a world renowned German porcelain factory. Shechet summarizes her career and work simply. "I'm trying to discover the form — trying to discover what I want to make," she says.

As you near the end of the show, her work is larger and more colorful. Porter notes that Shechet's latest pieces are looking back to the colorful Buddhas she began with: "There is constantly a conversation among the work."

INSIGHT GUIDES TRAVEL WEEKLY

WWW.INSIGHTGUIDES.COM TRAVEL WEEKLY, BOSTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 2015

The sounds of Puerto Rico

Jamaica has its reggae and Trinidad is famous for its calypso, but Puerto Rico is one of the most musically diverse islands in the Caribbean.

ALL PHOTOS GLYN GENIN/APA PUBLICATIONS

Puerto Rico has produced an impressive range of musicians, including famous names like Ricky Martin, Jose Feliciano, Rita Moreno, Daddy Yankee, Don "El Rey" Omar and Jerry Rivera. As a U.S. territory, it's also one of the easiest Caribbean islands to visit, requiring no U.S. passport and using U.S. dollars.

The island's history contributes to the wide range of styles you'll hear when you're there. When the Spaniards came, by way of Columbus in 1493, they brought with them religious and, later, classical music. Although born in Spain, the world-famous cellist Pablo Casals had a Puerto Rican mother and spent the last years of his life on the island. He's buried in the National Cemetery.

The period of Spanish rule was also a gateway for European folk music to come to the island. As in the U.S., folk music helped produce country music; the music created by the mountain-dwelling Jibaro people has been described as the island's equivalent of both folk and country.

The heavily drum-influenced bomba music was another import, brought to the island by African slaves in the 17th century. This is linked with plena music, which merged bomba with indigenous folk music, and produced the blend they call "bomba y plena."

Bomba y plena gave birth to the island's most famous music: salsa! It didn't solely originate in Puerto Rico but was also influenced by Cuban son music, and since it burst on the scene in New York, it's been further influenced by other Latin American nations and musical styles, together producing a true fusion music.

You'll hear music everywhere in Puerto Rico — played on instruments ranging from Spanish classical guitars to local gourds to drums made from hollowed-out tree trunks. There are several unique instruments too, including the cuatro, a 10-stringed guitar derived from the Spanish guitar. But whatever instrument is used, whatever style of music is being played and wherever you listen to it, you'll definitely take the sounds of Puerto Rican music home with you from a vacation.

Create your own candy bar, eat chocolate-infused entrées and even indulge in a cocoa facial in the chocolate-scented air of "The Sweetest Place on Earth."

It's fitting that a city created by chocolate has a museum dedicated to the sweet decadence. The Hershey Story Museum in Hershey, Pa., tells the story of how Milton Hershey discovered the secret to making milk chocolate. Take a class in the interactive chocolate lab and sample chocolates from around the world.

Hershey Chocolate World follows a cocoa bean from rain forest to candy bar. There's a create-your-own-candy-bar station and a chocolate-themed live show — with audience participation.

Just inhaling the air in the gift shop/candy store is enough to get a massive sugar high. Burn off that energy at Hershey Park. The theme park boasts over 70 rides and attractions, including 13 roller coasters (the newest coaster is an indoor, glow-in-the-dark model), 20 kiddie rides, a five-acre water park and live shows. All of the usual carnival foods are for sale, plus allergen-free options.

Zoo America, part of Hershey Park, is home to over 200 different North American animals. They live in geographically appropriate habitats, designed to recreate their homes in the wild.

A stroll through Hershey Gardens is a relaxing change of pace. It has 11 themed gardens including a butterfly house, a children's garden with activities for kids, a Zen-inspired Japanese garden and seasonal displays.

Even pampering is touched by chocolate. The Spa at Hotel Hershey is known for its chocolate treatments, like a cocoa facial and a soak in a whipped chocolate bath. There are spa service menus for women, men and kids 13 and older.

Hershey Lodge and Hersheypark Camping Resort offer packages for couples, families and friends; many include admissions with lodging. The Hershey website, HersheyPA.com, has links to those and more.

Before you sign up for a loan or make a major purchase, you should do a realistic assessment of your financial status. Consult a banking or investment adviser, if necessary, in order to clarify your position.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
You may be overwhelmed by the demands being put on you. Don't spread yourself too thin. It's perfectly fine to say no. Take care of your needs first and don't feel guilty.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Surround yourself with positive, upbeat people. Good moods are contagious, and you will feel your stress falling away once you loosen up. An intriguing partnership is on the horizon.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
If your instincts tell you something is not right, listen to them. Scam artists are very convincing, and if you fall for a sales pitch, you will have regrets.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
You will alienate the people you live with if you try to force your opinions. Take a step back and let matters settle down before you spoil a close relationship.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Love, harmony and romance are highlighted. Plan an intimate liaison with a special someone, or get out and meet someone new if you are single. Communication will lead to affection and commitment.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Introduce yourself to the person you have been admiring from a distance. You are likely to find a lot of common ground once you compare notes. A long-lasting partnership is apparent.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
You are likely to feel confined and to be easily upset if you stay indoors today. Use your energy to complete outdoor chores or to engage in some physical activity.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
A recent quarrel with someone will stress you out. Open up the lines of communication, declare your feelings and admit your shortcomings. EUGENIA LAST

Bad analysis

In Metro I read this statement from Chris Rupkey, chief financial economist at Union Bank in New York: "This is more confirmation that the economy is indeed emerging from that soft patch in the first quarter and can pick up even faster in the next few months."

From 2009, I read the same or similar conclusions at least six times! Before last week my wife lost her job after 17 years in the company, because the business [went] down; six people out of 19 were laid off. Last Friday was the last work day for my neighbor, who worked for 21 years at the company.

My questions are: Why do those analysts give us inaccurate information? Why don't they see that there are almost no "Help wanted" and "Now hiring" signs on the windows of businesses? Only the number of those signs is the real indication of the economy's health. Our economy is still sunk. And to emerge on a surface it needs more attention from U.S. government to our own problems, rather than about the problems of FIFA, Russia or Ukraine.

Crybabies on campus

Jerry Seinfeld was spot-on regarding how political correctness on college campuses has taken the fun out of performing. There was a time when college campuses were cutting edge. The country's policies during the Vietnam War were challenged and changed due to the uprisings on college campuses. Today, college campuses are as edgy as a basketball and as exciting as a nursing home.

"We don't want to watch American Sniper!" "Wah wah! You hurt my feelings!" "We are offended by everything and ban speakers from campus who don't agree with our views." Crybabies.

The liberal faculty is to blame for rejecting and demonizing opposing views and poisoning the minds of these young people. College is a time to become independent, thinking adults. Open your mind.

BASEBALL DEAL TIME IS HERE

Baseball is a unique sport because we can project accurately without ever watching a game.

There are no unquantifiable Matthew Dellavedova dives to the floor or Le'Veon Bell stiff arms. Everything in baseball can be measured, recorded and boiled down into statistics. While standard stats like batting average and ERA have a lot of flaws, advanced stats like wOBA, BABIP and xFIP tell a broader story. When those numbers get outside of career norms, we have trades to make.

Dee marks the spot

Dee Gordon is always going to have a high batting average on balls in play (BABIP) because he's so fast. But this year's .421 mark is out of control. Starling Marte led the league with a .373 mark last year and Gordon has never finished a season above .350. A regression is coming, meaning Gordon will be making more outs when he puts the ball in play and therefore will have less chances to steal bases. Sell him high.

Cashing in at Petco

Padres starter Andrew Cashner is 2-8 with a 4.05 ERA, but the advanced stats tell a different story. Cashner's 15.1 percent home run on fly ball rate is way above his 10.3 career mark, a number that will come down — especially with more starts at Petco Park. He has been hit with a .346 BABIP, ninth-worst in the league, meaning batters happened to be hitting it where the defenders aren't. And Cashner's xFIP, a metric that essentially measures what a pitcher's ERA would be if he had league-average luck, is a very good 3.38.

The real deal

You think you've struck gold with guys like Joc Pederson and A.J. Pollock but aren't quite sure. After examining the advanced stats, you'll know not to sell. Pederson ranks 11th and Pollock is 27th in wOBA, a catch-all metric that removes some of the flaws in batting average and on-base percentage. Both Pederson and Pollock are also within sustainable BABIP norms. Ride these young studs out through the season.

NFL OTA risers

Looking good this spring:

- Ryan Mathews, RB, Eagles — Philly plans to give DeMarco Murray (coming off 497 touches) far more breathers than the Cowboys did.
- Joseph Randle, RB, Cowboys — Darren McFadden (hamstring) and Ryan Williams (knee) are already hobbling around.
- Niles Paul, TE, Redskins — Jordan Reed has gone under the knife again, leaving the intriguing Paul as the no-doubt starter.

Miley gets the nod

The Red Sox will wrap up their three-game series with the Orioles tonight with Wade Miley (5-5, 4.67 ERA) taking the mound. Miley had a strong performance his last time out, going 7.1 innings against Oakland. Chris Tillman (3-7, 5.61 ERA) is slated to start for Baltimore. The Red Sox will be back home at Fenway on Friday against Toronto.

NHL. Julien dishes on a strange Bruins offseason

Claude Julien is now the longest-tenured head coach in the NHL, but he's well aware that the good times don't last forever.

"The important part was to understand the business and you have to allow the GM to assess and make decisions," Julien told ESPN about the Bruins waiting so long to commit to him this offseason. "[New Bruins GM Don Sweeney] has got to feel comfortable too. As much as it wasn't a lot of fun, or easy, it wasn't frustration, it was more about understanding the situation, and I understood it."

A massive overhaul does not seem likely right now. Instead, it looks as though Sweeney — and now Julien — are simply going to tinker.

"For people who think we're going to play a run-and-gun game, it's not happening," Julien said. "We can talk about all kinds of things. The teams that are in the finals right now, one of them had an even better goals-against-average than we did. This game hasn't changed. You need good defense. You need good offense. You need both and we've been able to do that for a lot of years."

Warriors must pick up the pace in Finals

NBA. Golden State cannot continue to get bogged down by the Cavaliers' "walk-it-up" offense.

The Warriors thrive with a frantic basketball pace. LeBron James and the Cavaliers are well aware of that, and their methodical, 1990s-style isolation game is currently winning out. James and the Cavs will look to go up 3-1 in the best-of-seven NBA Finals Thursday (9 p.m., ABC) in Game 4 at Quicken Loans Arena.

Golden State scored over 100 points in 11 of its first 16 games this postseason, including its Game 1 Finals win over the Cavs. But in the last two games, both losses, the Warriors have failed to break the century mark, losing by scores of 95-93 (OT) and 96-91.

The Warriors are certainly capable of breaking out of this funk, however. They had a remarkably similar first three games against the Grizzlies in the semifinals just a few weeks back. Against Memphis, they won Game 1, 101-86, but lost Games 2 and 3 by scores of 97-90 and 99-89. Stephen Curry was mortal in those first three games, like he has been in the Finals thus far, as he averaged 21.3 points per game.

But it was Game 4 in which Curry and the Warriors awoke from their daze. Not only did they break 100, they held Memphis to just 84 points. Curry scored 33 on 11-of-22 shooting.

Curry is obviously known for his shooting exploits from deep, but it's also important that he gets to the free throw line in Game 4. He did not shoot a foul shot in the Game 3 loss to the Cavs, just the second time this postseason that that has happened.

Curry's success obviously drives Golden State, but he can't be the only one who steps up if the Warriors have plans of evening things up. All five Golden State starters were in the "minus" category of plus/minus in Game 3, with Harrison Barnes and Draymond Green both owning an atrocious minus-14 mark.

David Lee, Leandro Barbosa and Andre Iguodala were the only players who had positive performances for the Warriors on Tuesday.

Stephen Curry has been relatively average so far in the Finals. / GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

LeBron James has already made history in the 2015 NBA Finals as his 123 total points through the first three games are a Finals record. James scored 44 points in Game 1, 39 points in Game 2 and 40 points in Game 3.
